Florida's horse industry is a highly diverse one that supports a wide variety of activities throughout the state. It combines the primarily rural activities of breeding, raising and training horses with the more urban activities of operating racetracks, off-track betting parlors, horse shows, polo, rodeos and other equine recreational pursuits. There are some 299,000 horses in Florida, with more than 70 percent involved in showing and recreation. Florida is home to nearly every breed of horse and is represented by equine champions known throughout the world. Their breeders, owners and trainers are drawn to Florida's year-round moderate climate, mineral-rich water and soil, outstanding facilities and strong support industries.
